Percentages shown here are for example only.
Table column widths are flexible and operate independently of page content grid - widths should be set to best accomodate page content.
Minimum table column width is 100px.

NOTE: when actions are used in a table, they should always occupy last (right) column, and should be right-aligned within column target width: 35% of table width (original 30% target + 5% from hidden column)	target width: 25% of table width (original 20% target + 5% from hidden column)	100px (min. column width)	100px (min. column width)

Shows responsive behavior of sample 1366x768 layout resized to 540x960px. Specs same as 768x1024px layout unless otherwise noted.

Minimum column width is 100px. If all columns cannot fit horizontally on page, columns will be hidden one at a time until remaining columns can fit (priority is determined on a case by case basis) .

In this example, 5 columns will not fit into the defined table width of 496px, so the "owner" column has been hidden to make space. The width of the hidden column is divided evenly among the remaining columns and added to the target width of each. Any columns wider than 100px minimum are reduced as necessary to maintain minimum width of 100px on all columns.
